Joe Soto Inducted Into the MSBL WS HOF!

70+ team members from both the Sacramento Tribe and the LA Athletics were on hand as Joe Soto received his WS Hall of Fame award.

WS Pre Game Protocol Includes Exchanging Complete Rosters

By Tom Prendergast

There's a hilarious comic routine done by Abbott and Costello (which appeared in the 1945 movie, the Naughty Nineties), called "Who's On First?" In this parody, Abbott continually confuses Costello, while trying to explain the lineup. And in a strange coincidence, those same kind of questions are being asked on MSBL WS ball fields every day. As several manager have pointed out to me, rule # 7, clearly states that; "For the sake of fairness and accuracy, the entire team's roster, must be exchanged by teams before the start of the game". Now a vast majority of our team managers arrive at the plate meeting with roster in hand and a lineup card ready to go. This allows for a productive plate meeting and sets the tone for the rest of the game. It also allows both teams to know if they plan on using the A/B or shared batter lineup. In the event that this topic isn't discussed, (continued on page 3)

MSBL WS 70+ Sacramento Tribe Joe Soto Newest HOF Member - By Steve Lamontia

If you fictitiously look in the dictionary under 'Joe Soto' it would begin with the phrase bleeds baseball. Joe Soto has constructed and led the Sacramento Tribe into an MSBL World Series champion for the ages. While playing in the Sacramento MSBL since 1993, this retired firefighter and high school coach adapts well to the national stage as a multiple ring-bearer from the MSBL World Series. Because of Joe's love of the game, and his success while playing and coaching it, MSBL Founder and President Steve Sigler has inducted Joe into the 2023 class of the MSBL World Series Hall of Fame. Joe is an institution in the Sacramento MSBL and his fan club rivals Taylor Swifts!

At the age of 75, Joe has hit his prime. The Tribe is truly to be feared, as evidenced by their 13 rings in multiple age groups. This year Joe will be playing with and managing the Tribe in the 65s and 70s, both in the National Division of course. "I love to play and am not just a manager," said Joe. "I will be playing with the Solons in the 73-over division, too." Joe has a baseball resume that lays to rest his ability or knowledge being adequate enough to lead the troops to title after title. He isn't a guy to sit on the bench, scribble a lineup into the score-book, and then cross his legs and watch the game. "My baseball journey began at Clarksburg High School for four years, Sacramento City College for two more, where we were runners-up in two State Championships. Then I attended Sacramento State College for two years where we won the Western Conference both years. I was fortunate enough to be named All-American Shortstop my senior year, which was 1970." No Hall of Fame story would be complete without a tribute from his best friend in baseball, and in life, Pat Kelly.

Joe continues to play in the Sacramento MSBL with the Dodgers in the 60s and 68s, where he both plays and manages. He wears many hats with the Dodgers, including shortstop, third baseman, coach, and manager. I asked Joe whom he would like (continued on page 3) to thank for being by his side during his baseball sojourn, both on and off the field. “First of all, my Dad Louis Soto, along with my bride of 48-years, Cindy, and my two daughters and four grandkids.

My high school coach Tom Pearse, my college coaches Del Bandy and Cal Boyes, and especially Ken Chavez, who started the Tribe in Sacramento and managed many championship teams. I certainly can’t forget my best friend Pat Kelly, whom I’ve played with for 30 years.

My thanks also go out to all the players I’ve played with and managed over the years.” When I asked Joe about a special moment from his highlight reel, he knew right away what we needed to report. “I played 81 straight innings for the Sacramento Tribe in 2013 in the Arizona World Series,” explained Joe. “Plus, we won the championship that year!” “I love baseball and the MSBL has given me the opportunity to keep playing and managing. It is really an honor to be inducted with so many great players and managers.”
